

SENATE BARS SMITH: COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE

MINISTER ON STAND TELLS OF SHOOTING

Rev. Norris Testifies in Own Defense in Murder Trial

Austin, Tex., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Dr. J. Frank Norris, fundamentalist pastor of Fort Worth, on the witness stand here today told his story of how he killed Dexter E. Chippis in his church office last July 17.

Weeping and halting over each word, he related how Chippis had come to his office, had demanded that he cease attacks on Chippis' friends, had threatened to kill him and of how he shot Chippis when he said the latter came at him with his hand on his hip pocket.

Before giving this part of the story, he had heard himself bitterly lambasted and warmly defended by attorneys in arguments over the admission of certain evidence. He set silently in the witness box for more than an hour listening to these arguments in which much of his past was raked over.

The jury was absent during this discussion.

Defense Lost Motion.
The debated evidence concerned a remote conversation alleged to have occurred between Mayor Meacham of Fort Worth and Norris which the defense wanted to introduce through Norris.

The judge ruled against the defense, but not before much of the difficulties between Norris and Meacham and the Fort Worth moral and political situation had been aired in addresses by the attorneys to the court.

The defense said they could link up the remote conversation in a chain of evidence with the killing of Chippis and in supporting this statement Attorney Moses of defense detailed a narrative in which Chippis, Meacham and Norris frequently came into opposition with each other.

Norris erect and still while attorneys for the state referred to him as "this fellow" and spoke of attacks he is alleged to have made on Fort Worth citizens from his pulpit. His face was tense.

After the jury had been recalled, Moses asked Norris when he first received information about threats by Chippis against him and Norris said it was the day before the tragedy.

After relating details of the telephone conversation with Chippis in which the lumberman said he was "coming over to settle" with Norris, the pastor told of the threat Chippis made against him.

"I asked who he was," said Norris. "He said it didn't matter. 'I'm coming over there to kill. I want you to stop that sermon,' and he cursed me. 'I said, 'you're mad and I don't want to see you.' He said his name was Chippis."

"In a few minutes L. H. Nutt came into my office and I asked him if he knew Chippis. He told me he had seen him at the bank."

"Why didn't you tell Mr. Nutt of your conversation with Chippis?" A state objection was sustained.

Wanted to Leave Office.
"I was intending to leave as soon as my sermon was ready."

"Why?"

"Because I didn't know whether Chippis would come and I didn't want to be there if he did."

"Tell what you know about Chippis being dangerous."

"I believed he was a dangerous man and would carry out his threats."

Norris said he was at his desk when Nutt arrived. He testified Chippis did not knock, but opened the door and came in as Norris was talking to Nutt.

"Chippis walked up to Mr. Nutt and 'I know this man. I've seen him at the bank.'"

TEACHER SAVED BOY FROM DEATH IN BUREAU FIRE

Crawled Through Fire and Smoke to Baby Alone in House

Bureau—After three men had failed to rescue James Decker, 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Decker, from his burning home Wednesday afternoon, Cecil Sharp, principal of the high school, with heroism but rarely equalled, crawled on his hands and knees through flames and smoke and saved the child's life.

The boy was practically overcome by smoke and his hair slightly burned. Mr. Sharp was overcome by smoke and collapsed as soon as the rescue was effected. He had practically recovered Thursday. The home was burned to the ground.

Crawls to Baby
Mr. Sharp was teaching his class when the fire whistled shrieked its warning and glancing through the window he saw the Decker home a mass of flames. He hastily dismissed the class and ran to the home, but then did not know that anyone was inside until he discovered Mildred Decker, older sister of the boy calling for someone to save her brother. By-standers told the principal that no one could live in the flames and smoke and that three men had tried to save the boy but failed. Thrusting aside all opposition, Mr. Sharp dropped on his hands and knees and crawled toward the room he thought the boy was in. He finally saw the feet of the youngster, the body being enveloped in smoke and flames and carried him to safety.

Mrs. A. S. Tavenner of Polo spent Tuesday afternoon with her husband in the Dixon hospital. Mr. Tavenner is able to sit up. If he continues to recover as everyone hopes he will, he will be home in a few days.

Estimating the population of Dixon at 10,000, a conservative figure, the fire loss for the year 1926 in this city has been estimated at a per capita cost per person of $1.29, according to figures that have been compiled by Elre Chief Thomas Coffey and forwarded to the office of the state fire marshal at Springfield.

Of this number, 25 were roof fires and 33 were chimney fires. The value of the property endangered was $201,300 and the contents were valued at $89,975. The insurance carried on the property represented $115,200 with $47,275 carried on the contents of the buildings.

Chief Coffey's figures show a fire loss for the year amounting to $12,929.88, which is a very low figure for the twelve months and represents a drop of one half over the previous year.

BYRON MERCHANT ON TRIAL TODAY IN OREGON COURT

Judge Edwards of Dixon Presides at Hearing of Frank Spoor

(Telegraph Special Service)
Oregon, Jan. 21.—Frank B. Spoor, Byron hardware merchant, indicted by the Ogle county grand jury two weeks ago on a charge of receiving stolen property, went to trial in circuit court here today before Judge Harry Edwards of Dixon.

Spoor was arrested after deputies from the sheriff's office were said to have found a quantity of clothing and other material in a secret basement under his store. Part of the material is said to have been identified by railroad operatives as having been stolen from freight cars on Ogle county yards.

When arraigned last fall, Spoor waived preliminary hearing and was held under bonds of $1000, which he furnished.

Former Chief Deputy George Banning, who is now a sergeant-at-arms in the state senate, and who led the raid on the Spoor store, will be one of the principal state witnesses, it was said. The prosecution is to be led by State's Attorney Martin V. Peterman. It is probable that Attorney H. A. Brooks, Dixon, will appear for the defendant.

Court Action TO SEAT HIM NOT PLANNED
Elections Committee of Senate to Arrange Public Hearing

Chicago, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Rumors circulated in Washington that the state of Illinois might go into the supreme court with a petition alleging that Illinois not be deprived of her constitutional representative in the senate by the exclusion of Frank L. Smith, were without verification here today. Before boarding a train for Washington, Attorney General Carlstrom of Illinois declined to comment. The lake water diversion suit has been claiming much of the attorney general's attention, but whether his visit to Washington also had a bearing on the Smith case was not disclosed.

Consider Possibilities
Some prominent republicans here believe that should the senate exclude Col. Smith from both the present session and the next to which he was elected by the people of Illinois, a vacancy would occur which would have to be filled by appointment of Gov. Small, says the Evening Post.

Col. Smith is now in Washington by appointment of the Governor to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator McKinley, whom he defeated last year, for the regular term beginning next March. The Post said some well known republicans expressed the opinion that the committee which will pass on Col. Smith's qualifications may keep the matter under advisement until next March.

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Denied a seat in the senate to which he holds a certificate of appointment, Frank L. Smith of Illinois must await another investigation into the financing of his primary campaign last year and a vote on the findings before learning whether he will sit in the present congress.

The vote by which the senator-designate was refused the oath of office pending the inquiry by the elections committee was 43 to 33. It was reached yesterday after two days of debate.

Smith had no comment to make, but he left immediately for his hotel to prepare a statement for publication. Governor Small, who appointed Smith to serve out the unexpired term of the late Senator McKinley, whom he defeated for the next congress at last year's primary, said at Springfield that he had no statement to make at this time.

To Arrange Hearing
The elections committee has been called to meet tomorrow to make arrangements for a public hearing for Smith.

The inquiry is expected to get under way in the near future and probably will be undertaken with a view to getting the business over with as quickly as possible in view of the annual appropriation bills and other major legislation awaiting action in the senate before the March 4 adjournment.

At Smith's hotel headquarters it was said no plans were being made for continuing his fight, pending the hearing before the Senate elections committee.

Doyle in Conference
J. C. Doyle, attorney for Smith, went to U. S. capitol to confer with Senator Deneen and Chairman Ernst of the election committee.

Suggestions of court proceedings were discontinued at the Smith headquarters where it was insisted that the elections committee would have the next say.

One suggested course is for the State of Illinois to go into the supreme court with a complaint that it is being deprived of the "equal representation" in the senate as guaranteed by the constitution.

ADMIT SENATE'S RIGHTS
Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—In the absence of an official statement from Gov. Len Small today, a communication to The Associated Press from the Attorney General's office indicated that no efforts will be made at the state capital to force recognition of Senator-designate Frank L. Smith's appointment to the post made vacant by the death of Senator William B. McKinley.

"Illinois recognizes the authority of the United States senate to sit in judgment on its own members," the communication said. "If the governor's appointee is not wanted in the senate the members of that body have a right to say so."

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom was not in Springfield today and his office reported that "he might be on his way to Washington."

of Going to Court
It was denied, however, that he plans to take the Smith case to the United States Supreme Court with a petition that Illinois be not deprived

GANG FEUD BEGAN IN QUARREL OVER GAMBLING CRAFT

It was this building that recently was dynamited, causing the deaths of four persons.

Birger invested about $10,000 in Shady Rest, where in addition to the other attractions he had a small menagerie, a dog and chicken fighting pit, a bar, a bottling establishment and gambling tables.

Meanwhile, Birger continued to prosper in the booze business, getting much of his better stuff through the Sheltons. He followed a policy of cutting this before the federal consumer only about one-fifth of the original contents of a quart bottle retained a proportion which holds good in practically every quart of "good imported stuff" sold today.

Such "cutting" was skillfully done. A St. Louis house supplied bottles (both of the "non-refillable" and other types), caps and label at $3 a case, though $5 was the usual price to the trade. Counterfeit seals were readily obtained.

Sit Machines

In November of 1925 Birger suggested to the Shelton boys that they combine forces and gain control of the slot machine rights (a highly lucrative concession) in Williamson county and install the contrivances in some of the many roadhouses there.

The Sheltons agreed, with the understanding that Birger would furnish the bulk of the capital while the Sheltons were to secure the required protection from the authorities.

On Dec. 18 all the machines held previously by the Sheltons and Birgers were consolidated and I was employed to attend to collection at $30 a week and expenses.

In the succeeding month the score or so of machines returned a net profit of $507, or half the receipts. The other half went to the various roadhouse owners in whose places they were kept.

Then on Feb. 13, 1926, a shutdown order came from the state's attorney's office at Marion and the places were closed, but for a short time only.

On their reopening Birger decided my expenses were running too high and gave one John Howard my job at $100 a month and expenses.

Real Cause of Feud

In the first five weeks under Howard's administration the machines returned a net profit of $1700, which was turned over to Birger in his capacity of treasurer of the business.

Charles called Carl Shelton in, this was in March, 1926, and gave him $300 as the Sheltons' share.

Unfortunately for Birger he fired Howard and replaced him with "Casey" Jones. Howard then told Carl just how much the Sheltons' agreed 50-50 split should have been and there you have the real cause of the Birger-Shelton feud.

Birger held out $550 on the Sheltons and the result was the bloodiest gang warfare in American history. The community has been terrified through the frequent use of machine guns, aerial bombs and dynamite and many men have been killed.

Even Birger Doesn't Know

Birger still is under the delusion that it was caused by the Sheltons' suspicion that he pocketed $1000 which a Harrisburg garageman had offered for the recovery of a diamond ring taken from him in a robbery staged by some gangsters.

The Sheltons, despite their discovery of the double-crossing decided to bide their time for a while.

Meanwhile, over in Herrin, Klan and anti-Klan hatred was being kept alive. On April 13, 1926, this hatred burst forth into a fresh flame of spitting guns.

The story of new battles between Kluxers and anti-Klux will be told in the next article of this series.

IRISH NAME LUCKY

San Francisco—Thirteen years ago James Kelly was a bus boy in one of the leading hotels here. The other day he came back as a first class guest.

His name used to be Demetrius Kellys he explained, but when he arrived in this country his friends began calling him Kelly, and later Jim Kelly.

The Irish name seemed to bring him luck, he said, as his restaurant in the Rocky Mountains near Boise, Idaho, grew into a chain of eating houses.

ILLINOIS LEADS U. S. IN HIGHWAY WORK; FUND SMALL

Revenue for Construction Smallest of Any State in Union

Springfield, Ill.—(AP)—While county supervisors, municipal officers and automobile clubs are voicing their reaction to the proposed gasoline tax to be used in building roads, the department of highways continues with its program which already has placed Illinois in the lead of all states in improved hard road mileage.

Officials of the department support the gas tax but refuse to be openly quoted on the subject. However, they point to a host of statistics which may be interpreted as favoring the measure.

Illinois leads all states in miles of completed concrete roads, a national census of Jan. 1, 1926 (the last census available) shows. The first six states and their total miles of concrete roads are: Illinois, 4,170; Pennsylvania, 1,880; California, 1,539; Michigan, 1,256; New York, 1,145; and Wisconsin, 1,047. Illinois now has more than 6,000 miles.

This record has been made, they point out, although the state's total revenue for road building, in ratio to population, is the lowest in the United States. This revenue is derived solely from motor vehicle license fees, and is used to retire the bond issues. Most other states have a gasoline tax.

The ranking of the six leading states is: Illinois, 48th (lowest); Pennsylvania, 25th; California, 44th; Michigan, 23rd; New York 43rd and Wisconsin, 23rd.

Moreover, thirty-four states have tax rates which average higher than the Illinois average cost to motorists. Computed in ratio to the number of licensed motor vehicles, Illinois ranks 36th; Pennsylvania, 11th; California, 48th (lowest); Michigan, 20th; Wisconsin, 26th and New York 13th. California is the only state of the six with a lower cost to the motorist. This resulted from a radical reduction made in license fees when the gasoline tax was adopted. The state now is agitating for increase license fees, it was said.

Illinois, New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey are the only four states that have not adopted a gas tax. New York is the only one of the other three with an appreciable concrete mileage, and it ranks 13 in average cost to motorists. New Jersey has only 280 miles of concrete and Massachusetts 201 miles.

To claims of those opposing the gas tax that the tax has provided sufficient funds with which to complete its present program, the department calls attention to the following facts.

The legislature increased the program of construction under the $60,000,000 bond issue without increasing the bond issue. Therefore the state must make $45,000,000 from the new $100,000,000 issue to pay obligations under the former issue.

The $100,000,000 bond issue was originally proposed "to pay off obligations remaining from the $60,000,000 issue and construct approximately 2,500 miles of new roads." The bond issue remained unchanged, but the legislature changed the program to call for construction of approximately 5,000 miles of roads, or twice the original figure.

Cost of building one mile of concrete pavement is approximately $30,000. The department has been asked to build about 1,000 miles of concrete roads, which would cost approximately $150,000,000 with the remainder of the new bond issue, or $150,000,000, which is, obviously, an impossibility, the department officials state.

A gasoline tax would bring in about $9,000,000 yearly, and, with sale of bonds and federal aid, would make it possible to complete the present program in about eight years. Otherwise working with a budget of present resources, 18 to 20 years will be necessary for completion, depriving motorists of the use of the new highways for ten years.

of constitutional representation.

"Mr. Carlstrom," the communication said, "has been representing Illinois in the waterways diversion suit at Washington. He may be returning to that, but certainly not in connection with the Smith case."

Official circles here expected silence from Governor Small. It is understood to be his view that the appointment is made and that if finally, the senate committee ousts Smith, its action will go unchallenged.

May Mean Election

Failure to seat Smith in March, when the term to which he was elected otherwise would start, may leave Illinois with but one United States senator until a special election can be held in 1928, according to belief in political circles.

It was significantly hinted today that in such instance Smith may elect to enter the race again and that if successful in 1928 Illinois may "wage a definite battle to defend its sovereignty."

At all odds, the Attorney General's office said, Smith can draw a salary as senator from Illinois, from March until December 1927, when congress convenes.

Whether Governor Small will name another to fill the McKinley vacancy in the event of Smith's defeat was believed to be highly problematical. In sources close to the chief executive it was held that he may choose to ignore the situation.

Others, however, expressed the belief that Fred Lundin, Chicago, long a political friend of the governor can have the appointment if he wants it.

ALL FRATERNAL COMPANIES NOW UNDER ILL. LAW

Must File Copies of Policies at State Insurance Office

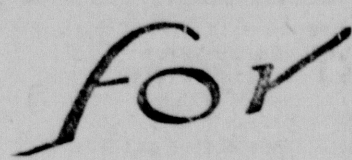

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Insurance companies or beneficial associations operating under the assessment or fraternal plan, although originally exempt, are now subject to state supervision and must file a copy of their policy with the superintendent of insurance. Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom said in an opinion today.

The opinion was in answer to a query from Alex J. Johnson, state superintendent of insurance, who wished to know if the law regulating insurance companies passed in 1907, which included a provision exempting "corporations or associations operating on the assessment or fraternal plan," was still operative.

The attorney general referred Mr. Johnson to the act of 1915 which provided that no policy of insurance should be issued until a copy of the policy is filed with the superintendent. His opinion, holding all fraternal or mutual assessment companies liable to all state insurance restrictions, was further based on the act of

OLD MASTERS

How happy is he born and taught,
That serveth not another's will:
Whose armor is his honest thought,
And simple truth his utmost skill!

Whose passions not his masters are,
Whose soul is still prepared for death,
Untied unto the world by care
Of public fame, or private breath.

Who envies none that chance doth so

Nor vice; Who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise;

Nor rules of state, but rules of good;
Who hath his life from rumors freed,

Nor ruin make oppressors great;

Who God doth love and early pray,
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day

Of hope to rise, or fears to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands;
And having nothing, yet hath all.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at the Prairieville church, Feb. 2nd. At this time the annual mid-winter picnic will be held. It is what is termed as a "scramble" dinner and the entire Prairieville community is welcome. The committees for the following year will be appointed by the next meeting. One new member was added to the society.

Baked Apple Dumplings

Four large tart apples, 1 cup sugar, 1 lemon, 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 cup milk (about), 1-4 teaspoon salt.

Pare apples and core without breaking apples. Make a syrup of the sugar and about 1 cup of boiling water. Add grated lemon rind and carefully put the apples in the syrup. Cook until the apples are tender but not broken. Remove from syrup with a skimmer. Continue to cook syrup until thick. Mix and sift flour and baking powder and rub in butter with tips of fingers. Add milk, cutting it in with a knife. Use enough milk to make a rather soft dough. Roll on a floured board, making a sheet of dough not more than 1-2 inch thick. Cut in squares large enough to completely cover apples. Place an apple in the center of each square, fill cavities of fruit with butter, lemon juice and sugar and pour the thick syrup over apples. Moisten the corners of the squares and press together over the tops of the apples. Bake in a hot oven for ten or fifteen minutes. Serve warm with sugar and cream.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Sumner

FAIRY TALE VEIL

A certain young lady was recently married in a $50,000 lace wedding veil, and her twelve bridesmaids wore pretty dresses which cost, respectively, a few dozen thousand. We hope that the happy bridegroom will be able to continue to support his bride in the style to which she has been accustomed. Which means that we don't hope any such thing, but quite the reverse! Funny, but nothing so silly "us girls" who must go forth in the old grey dawn to labor for the wherewithal for a $29.50 marked-down dress as the tale of a lovely young thing handed by her papa or rich uncle a mere little bauble costing several million!

Speaking of "us girls," who labor for our hire, comes along a certain lady secretary of "Amalgamated Doughtnut Holes, Inc., or something or other, to give business women advice. First of all, sez she, we are not liked. We are merely tolerated by our male colleagues and must work to make 'em like us, force 'em into it, as it were. And she says the best way to do it is to be very feminine, wear fluffy-ruffy clothes, be sweet, and remind them that though we are just a Tillie the Toilet, we're good women at heart, bless us. She thinks red dresses are swell for inspiring this toleration in the male bosom. She scorns the old rule of "tailored, sensible clothes," such as dark blue suits and low-heeled shoes and high collars.

She says, when you have a hard job to pull, wear a red, swashbuckling, knock 'em for a loop dress. You will feel confident and be it! Well, it makes a good story, and like most things that sound foolish, is largely true—only, well, just only—SIX FAIRY TALEBEARERS

Here's romance for you to the bitter end! Isaac Smith of the ripe old age of 78, expects to die some day, and he wants a funeral he can be proud of. So Isaac has six old sweethearts to act as his pallbearers. The dispatch doesn't say, but we are sure they will sing "When You and I Were Young Maggie" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold." And how the six will glare at one another each one believing she was the first and only one loved!

THE "FORGOTTEN WOMEN"

There are half a million "forgotten women," mothers of families, mired in illiteracy and ignorance, according to federal statistics on illiteracy. Ellen Glasgow, the novelist, has one of these "forgotten women" say in one of her novels—"A woman and a dog are about the only creatures as would put up with this life, and they're the biggest pair of fools that Lord ever made."

Time was when practically all women slaved from morning to night for their families and never questioned the why for nor whether. It was taken for granted not only by themselves but by their families. The very fact that these women, thin and wrinkled in youth from ill-prepared food, clad without warmth or grace, living in untidy houses, working from daylight to bedtime at the dull round of weary duties, the mothers of joyless children, worn out by excessive maternity, "are regarded as a problem rather than the rule," proves again that "the world do move."

EDUCATION PAYS SURE DIVIDENDS

By Olive Roberts Barton.

If one has spent years of training for a special work, and then been forced by some contrary jinx of misfortune to earn a living in a manner a hundred times removed from that special preparation, it is a mistake to think those years wasted.

Half the value of any training is not in the knowledge gained, but in a systematized, high-powered brain made alert and responsive to study.

I talked today with a business man who lamented that his son who had been trained for medicine had turned out to be a boiler salesman. I suppose I looked puzzled, for no matter how I stretched my imagination I could not see how any three-quarter fledged medical student could be put into one end of the sausage machine of worldly affairs and come out a boiler salesman at the other.

The father explained that it was the war. That accounted for it—guns, tanks, airplanes, boilers! An easy transition quite understandable. "I'd spent several thousand dollars making a doctor out of him, the young rascal," said the disappointed parent, "and it all went for nothing. I wish I had it back. He got as bawky as an Arkansas mule, though after the war and we couldn't do a thing with him. Threw up the whole business and got a job selling boilers as big as battleships to mills and things."

"In one way," went on the disappointed father, "he didn't do so bad. He's a hustler and he makes about fifteen thousand dollars a year in commissions."

"And yet you think he was a failure," I exclaimed.

"Oh, no! He's done all right. I only say it's a shame I wasted all that money on college. He didn't need an education to sell boilers."

I said nothing. His tone was final. But no one could keep me from thinking then and now that the investment in that boy's education had yielded dividends beyond anything ever quoted in the Wall Street Journal.

RETURN TO STATE OF JUST POWERS, URGED BY REED

Missouri Senator Says People are Buried Under Law Mass

New York, Jan. 21—(AP)—The return to the states of "their natural and just authority" so as to bring the federal government "back to its original simplicity" is urged by Senator J. A. Reed, democrat, Missouri.

The senator in an address last night before the National Boot & Shoe Manufacturers Association, asserted that the maxim "that people is governed best which is governed least" had been buried under a mass of statutes which seek "to control, regulate or coerce almost every activity of man."

"To enforce this innumerable laws, regulations and rules," he said, "a horde of officials, tax gatherers, snoopers and spies swarm over the land like the lice of Egypt devouring the substance of the people."

The senator was hailed as a prospective president by J. C. McKeon, Philadelphia, president of the Boot & Shoe Manufacturers Association.

MASTERSTROKE OF FORD'S LIFE IS RELATED TODAY

Said It was When He Bought Minority Stock of Firm

Detroit, Jan. 20—(AP)—Henry Ford told of having made the master stroke of his career when he bought out minority stockholders of the Ford Motor Company in 1919, according to H. M. Jewett, former president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Company.

Testifying in the government tax suit pending now at Detroit, Ford said on the basis of $12,500 a share Ford paid for the stock, the total apparent valuation of the company at that time would have approximated only $250,000,000.

Jewett testified the original valuation set on the stock as of 1917 was not too high and estimated its worth at that time at $12,500 a share. The government maintains that the original valuation should have been only $3,547 a share and seeks to obtain $20,000,000 from former stockholders in additional taxes which would have accrued from profits shown on sale, had the lower valuation been set.

BLACK MARKS FOR VIOLATORS.

In its annual report the Massachusetts judicial council makes two recommendations concerning violations of traffic laws. One of them, providing for some speedy method of handling cases, is meeting with approval in various cities. The other, recording on licenses the offenses of which the driver has been guilty, is novel, and will encounter the common difficulty of enforcement.

In the opinion of the judicial council ordinary violations of traffic laws should not have to follow the course usual in criminal cases. It is recommended that some system be found whereby offenders pay their penalties speedily, not being required to wait their turns in courtrooms, and not requiring the attendance of police officers. In short, the council desires to remove the violator of a parking ordinance from the criminal class and to permit him to appear before the clerk of a court and pay a fixed penalty, unless he is desirous of a trial.

It is estimated that a fourth of the police department of a city is required to be on duty in police courts to be in readiness to testify in the cases in which the arrests were made. Needless to say, this is a burden upon the police departments, none of which is over-manned. Crimes of violence need the attention of policemen, and officers have plenty to do outside of police courts.

Motorists would be allowed to suit their convenience in appearing before a clerk who would be authorized to receive the money to be forfeited. If the case were to be contested, then the usual criminal procedure would be invoked.

The placing of "black marks" on the license of the motorist who had violated traffic regulations or state laws contemplates a written record of the licenses and its holder, always to be in the possession of the driver. On every occasion on which a driver had been found guilty, an officer would make the record. By such a written document a police officer could see at a glance the motor history of the person with whom he was dealing.

While there may be no doubt of the desirability of such a record by the police department, the practicability of such a system is questioned in Massachusetts, where it was proposed by the judicial council. It might be more desirable for the offender to offend again by losing his license record rather than to show it to the officer. In that event it would be necessary to go to the court records, which are available anyhow. The question is raised as to whether the extra labor in keeping duplicate records would be warranted by the return of efficiency.

BORAH'S WRONGNESS.

The Washington Post says:

"Senator Borah either gets to the wrong place in the right way, or to the right place in the wrong way, but the break of the chairman of foreign relations with his own party, his own president, and his own secretary of state on the protection of American interests in Nicaragua shows that he hasn't learned yet how to get to the right place in the right way."

It is unfortunate for this nation that Senator Borah is chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations. In this country we understand him, or, perhaps we only understand that we do not understand him. Whatever the fact may be, we do not expect him to agree with anybody on anything. If he found himself in substantial agreement with the majority, we should expect him to shift his position on some pretext or other before night.

Foreign nations, which do not have the same estimate of Borah as we have are likely to be misled by his opposition to the administration in matters pertaining to them. Chairmanship of the committee on foreign relations has great significance abroad, and it will be with difficulty that other nations are convinced that the senator is not speaking the sentiment of the people in opposition to the president. The fact is quite likely to be that the president is voicing the popular sentiment or at least that popular sentiment will back the executive.

If Borah were at the head of the senate judiciary committee or ways and means committee, the difference in policy would not be so dangerous, for in this nation we know what to expect from Borah, and matters that come before those committees mainly are domestic, and it does not matter how foreign nations regard them.

As well as getting to the right place in the wrong way and to the wrong place in the right way, Senator Borah has become the right man in the wrong chairmanship.

THE TINYMITES

BY MAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Eskimo the Tines found was kind and showed them all around. He'd made real friends with Clowzy, so the crowd thought him all right. The Tines all thought Clowzy lost, but into luck he had been tossed, 'cause he had met the Eskimo and stayed with him all night.

"I haven't had much fun of late," their new friend said. "And this is great to meet a bunch of little folks all set to run and play. I'll show you sights you'll say are real. Perhaps we'll find a bear or seal, if you will just be patient, 'cause they often come this way."

Some other Eskimos came out to find out what 'twas all about. They'd heard the high pitched voices of the little Tines. They all were friendly as could be, and Coppy said, "It seems to me that we had best get started, if we're going to see the sights."

So, down a long ice path they went.

The Eskimo seemed quite intent on scaring or the polar bear to please his little friends, who gladly joined him on the hunt. Just then they heard a nearby grunt, and someone loudly shouted, "This is where our journey ends."

In just about a minute more the bear came forth amid a roar. The Eskimo ran up to him and stroked his fuzzy head. The Tines eyes were open wide. Such wondrous stunts they'd never tried. Then, "Who would like to ride this bear?" the fur boy loudly said.

"Oh, I would," came the quick reply. The Tines all were glad to try, so Mister Polar Bear stood still while one crawled on his back. And then the bear jumped quickly out amid the very happy shout. The whole gang raced along so they could follow in his track.

(The Tines feed a seal in the next story.)

SAINT and SINNER

Dr. Atkins was waiting for them in the foyer of the big hospital building. All his boyish briskness had left him; he looked stricken, personally grieved, and curiously apologetic. He went straight to Faith, and she had the odd impression that he would have liked to put his head down on her broad, motherly young shoulders and cry, like a hurt child.

"I want to tell you how it happened," he spoke in a low, almost pleading voice. "We'd taken every precaution to keep her from hearing anything about Cher—Mrs. Wiley. I don't want you to think, Mr. Lane, he turned to Faith's father and laid a trembling hand on his shoulder—"that anyone in the hospital was to blame."

"Then she found out," Jim Lane said dully, drawing a shaking, gnarled old brown hand across his eyes. "Martha died knowing about Cher."

"What I want to know is how she found out," Junior blustered angrily. "Who's an outlet for his grief. 'Who spilled the beans—I mean, who went and blabbed to her?' I'll kill him!" "I'm afraid you can't Long," Dr. Atkins spoke with sorrowing respect, not with impatience. "It was a woman patient who accidentally gave the whole thing away. She's a wheel chair patient, been here for two years, and she's given a good deal of freedom, as the chronics always are. Her husband—though of course we didn't know all this 'till later—came to see her and brought a copy of the extra carrying the news of Cherry's indictment."

He flushed as his small, grief-stricken audience winced at his words.

"He gave his wife the paper without mentioning the Cluny case. In fact, the paper was folded. He stuck it through the arm of her wheel chair and hurried away to his dinner. Mrs. Jost—that's the woman's name—wheeled herself down the third floor corridor past her mother's room. He was speaking to Faith again, holding her hand in a tight grip, but glancing occasionally at Bob Hathaway's set, white face. "Mrs. Lane was sitting propped up in bed, with her tray before her, eating her supper."

"Where was the nurse?" Jim Lane demanded harshly. "I thought we was paying enough to—"

"The nurse had stepped across the hall to the chart room to record Mrs. Lane's pulse and temperature, taken just before her supper tray arrived. You can't blame the nurse, Lane. I tell you it was an accident. No one was to blame."

"Please go on, Dr. Atkins," Faith urged him compassionately. "I'm sure no one can really be blamed. Poor Mother!" Her voice broke, and she bit her lip to keep it from trembling.

"Mrs. Lane was lonely, and she liked to talk to the other patients. Everyone had been warned, we believed, not to discuss the case with her."

His hearers nodded, their eyes tense. "Mrs. Lane called out to Mrs. Jost and Mrs. Jost wheeled herself into the room, glad of a chance for a chat. She's a sociable old lady, and really does a lot of good, cheering up the bedridden patients. Mrs. Lane caught sight of the paper and asked her to let her see it. Mrs. Jost gave it to her without unfolding it. Of course, one look at the headlines—"

"Did she say anything?" Jim Lane asked heavily.

"She—she got out of bed, started to run to the door, called out Cherry's name, just as the nurse came running into the room. Mrs. Jost had screamed, I believe, at the sight of Mrs. Lane's horror. Then—she fell. I got to her within five minutes—I was in the hospital—but it was too late."

TOMORROW, Faith looks upon death for the first time. Isn't Cherry really a murderer now?

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

A PROPHET HAS

ARISEN IN GERMANY

Editor Dixon Telegraph:

A prophet has arisen in Germany, who is drawing great crowds in Berlin and Potsdam. I had heard so much of his evangelistic power that I made up my mind to go and hear him myself. So I went to hear him last in Potsdam. I had no trouble to find the place of meeting, as the crowds were streaming in that direction. It was a large hall seating a thousand or more people. It was crowded to the door, and hundreds standing. Most of them were well dressed and seemed well to do and intelligent people. I was anxious to see the man who was attracting these people. I had heard worse things about him than even the Pharisees and Sadducees and Scribes said about the Christ. I expected to see a long-haired man, with a peculiar garb. But to my surprise he was plainly dressed, a round about coat, a fine head, an earnest countenance free from the marks of King Barleycorn.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHERNS

He entered the hall without any demonstration whatever. In fact we did not know which one was to be the speaker, until he arose on the platform where a dozen other prominent advocates of the New Cult were seated.

The service began by all singing a hymn, then all joined in repeating the Lord's prayer. The new prophet, Joseph Weissenberg, then arose and delivered a Scriptural Sermon to a most attentive audience. Judging the man from the utterances of his own lips, I should not hesitate to let a man preach such a sermon to my own congregation, if I had one. He made you feel that he believed what he said, and his words carried conviction to many hearts.

His build, and his manner of delivery, resembled that of our Evangelistic Prophet, Dwight L. Moody. He made you feel that Christ was present in and with the Holy Spirit. That He is really present with His people today, as He was with His Disciples in the flesh. That His soul-saving and healing power is just as effective now as ever. The trouble is, our lack of faith fails to appropriate that power. Too many of our churches worship a dead Crucifix. Instead of a living Christ. The Crucifix is set up over all your church altars. Yet God commands, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image or any likeness of anything in Heaven, or Earth or under the Earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God."

Christ says, "Why do ye hang me on the Cross, with scarcely any clothes on my bleeding body? I never appeared before the people in that way. It was my enemies who did that. Why will you persist in following the example of my persecutors? I am not dead. I am alive forevermore. I am with you always even to the end of the World. Wherever two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. Whatsoever ye ask in my name it shall be given unto you. The prayer of faith shall save the sick. Ye have not because ye ask not."

As might be expected, the preachers of the State Church are deadest against this Holy Ghost Evangelist. I am not prepared to pass judgment upon the merits and permanency of his ministry. One thing is evident, the Common People hear him gladly. As Lincoln said, "God must love the common people, because He made so many of them." The best evidence of Christ's Divinity was "That the Gospel was preached to the poor, and that the common people heard him gladly."

This latterday prophet and live wire may serve to arouse the church out of its spiritual lethargy and dead formalism, and revive in its ministry and loyalty, some of the much needed Pentecostal Power. Such a revival is needed, not only in Germany, but in our own beloved country as well.

Hydrogen Balloon Gas is Regaining Favor With Fliers

Washington—(AP)—Helium, one of the youngest members of a large family of gases, but very useful to Uncle Sam because it lifts balloons, is looking to its laurels. Hydrogen, an older brother, is returning to favor.

Because of its high inflammability, hydrogen left a quality to be desired which helium was subsequently found to possess. Helium, however, was exceedingly rare as opposed to the abundance of its rival, and it was expensive to manufacture.

Recently the experience of a British dirigible visited by lightning during a storm led to the conclusion that hydrogen was more to be respected than disdained. If they could eliminate an additional hazard, that of combustible fumes generated by the gasoline motors, engineers believe they re-establish hydrogen as premier for gas-bag inflation. Development of an engine utilizing crude oil for fuel has monopolized their efforts.

JOHN RAWLINGS USES LINIMENT KEEPS FREE OF ACES AND PAINS

If Reader Feels Tired Out, Lame And Sore. Here Is A Good Tip

LINIMENT KEEPS YOU LIMBER, SPRY, SUPPLE

Men and women who suffer with lame, stiff, aching backs, joints or muscles, and would like to be free of such troubles should take a tip from Big League Stars like John Rawlings says—"It sure is a grand and glorious feeling to get a rub-down with Mike Martin's Liniment when you feel all tired out, lame and sore, it takes the kinks out like magic."

Big League Stars couldn't play ball if crippled up with aches, pains, swollen, stiff joints, or rheumatism. Whenever they get that way no time is lost in quickly relieving the trouble. Mike Martin's Liniment is a higher priced more expensive liniment than ordinary remedies, but it is worth the difference—quicker, sure, safer and better—more pleasant to use also. It is unquestionably the best money can buy. High-priced "Stars" wouldn't feel with anything but the best.

With each bottle of Mike Martin's Liniment you buy at the drug store comes a folder telling just how this famous trainer treats various aches, pains, joints, and different rheumatic troubles, lame back, etc. 15 years' experience makes Mike Martin probably the world's greatest expert on such troubles. Take John Rawlings' tip. Get a bottle at drug store or write name and address plainly and send with dollar bill for large bottle postage paid to—Mike Martin, Trainer, Washington Hall Club, Brentwood, Md.

FORD GREATEST ASSET OF FORD CO., SAYS RIVAL

Head Packard Motor Co. Praises Pioneer in Industry

Detroit, Jan. 21—(AP)—The greatest asset of the Ford Motor Co. is Henry Ford himself in the opinion of Alvan MacAuley, president of the Packard Motor Company.

MacAuley, giving expert testimony for the defense in the government tax suit against former stockholders of the Ford Co., termed Ford a man of daring ideas who led the way in every conceivable manner in the automobile industry.

Asked his opinion as to the proper valuation of Ford stock as of 1913, which was originally set by the government at $2,483.34 a share, but which it now maintains should have been less than $3,600, MacAuley boosted the original price by setting the figure at $12,000 a share. The government maintains it lost approximately $30,000,000 in taxes on profits accruing from the sale as the result of the high original valuation.

A. W. Gregg, chief of government counsel entered strenuous objection to MacAuley testifying as an expert. The presiding judges allowed the testimony to stand however, "for what is worth."

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS FAIRS ASK LAWS ALLOWING WAGER ON HORSE RACES

Lee Co. Fair Assn. is Represented at Meeting of State Assn.

The Illinois Association of Agricultural Fairs, in its meeting at Danville this week, which was attended by Gilbert P. Finch of Amboy, newly elected secretary of the Lee County Fair Association, and President Laramie, went on record as favoring wagering on horse races as a means assisting in financially to overcome the reverses met by most of them last year due to the long continued rains.

A legislative committee, composed of William Ryan, Jr., of Danville, Michael Bray, of Litchfield, and Ellis Cox of Carthage, was appointed to draft bill to be presented to the Legislature asking that body to legalize the pari mutuel method of wagers. Quincy was chosen as the convention city for 1928. Governor Len Small was elected president; A. W. Brunz, of Breeze, was elected vice president and S. J. Standard, director of the state department of agriculture, was elected secretary-treasurer.

INDIANS' NEW PILOT EXPECTS WINNING TEAM

Takes Team Just Like
Second Place

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 21—(AP)—Jack McAllister, new manager of the Cleveland Indians, expects to fashion a winning team for the 1927 pennant race, out of the same aggregation that followed his veteran predecessor Speaker to the runner-up position in the American League last year. The Indians have made no trades nor are any in prospect. However five recruits will don feathers during the training camp campaign and McAllister expects to muster enough strength to bolster the team.

The new pilot will have his most trying time in filling the gap in center field left by Speaker's retirement. Speaker's uncanny fielding, his throwing and base running ability will not easily be substituted. Homer Summa, Pat McElvally or Freddie Eichrodt may get the position or it may be one of the newcomers.

Of the recruits, Willis Hudlin is regarded as a candidate for a place on the 1927 pitchers' staff.

Earl Collard is another prospect for a berth as a hurler.

The other newcomers are candidates for the outfield. George Gerken was obtained from Decatur and E. J. Woelber from Dallas.

Training camp plans have not been completed. Some of the members are going to Hot Springs before proceeding to Lakeland, Florida where the Indians will be in training.

NOMINATIONS TO TAKE BAN'S JOB EARLY, HE SAYS

President of American League Indicated
He'll Not Quit

Chicago, Jan. 21—(AP)—The growing list of nominations for the job of President Pan Johnson of the American League is a bit premature, the founder of the league and its ruler for more than a quarter of a century intimated today.

Asked whether he had given a thought to resigning, President Johnson declined to commit himself. Under his written contract and a later resolution of league directors, Johnson's presidential authority runs until 1935 at $40,000 a year.

The issue at next Sunday's session of the American League directors, Mr. Johnson indicated, is to decide what to tell Commissioner Landis the following day about the dismissal of Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker.

Quincy was chosen as the convention city for 1928. Governor Len Small was elected president; A. W. Brunz, of Breeze, was elected vice president and S. J. Standard, director of the state department of agriculture, was elected secretary-treasurer.

First of International Ring Matches in New York

New York, Jan. 21—(AP)—Elly Clark, champion of European flyweights, will meet Fidel LaBarba, king pin of the world's 112 pounders, in the first international title match of 1927. The bout is scheduled for 12 rounds at Madison Square Garden.

Clark, accustomed to 20 round matches in Europe, is considered at a handicap over the 12 round route, where La Barba's speed is expected to put up a large margin of points in the early rounds.

The bout will start at 10 p. m.

Chicago Hopes to Win from Purdue this Eve

Chicago, Jan. 21—(AP)—Week end basketball matches of the Big Ten open tonight with Chicago, near the bottom of the standing, entertaining Purdue, which is crowding the leaders.

The Maroons lost a close decision to Iowa a week ago and two days later the Iowans beat Purdue, giving Chicago the hope that tonight will see their second victory in the Big Ten season. Purdue, however, has the leading scorer of the conference at center, Cummins, with Wilcox, next year's football captain, another dangerous threat.

The other Big Ten teams get into action tomorrow night with the Michigan-Indiana contest at Bloomington. These two teams are tied for conference leadership with three victories each and no defeats.

Petrolle and Myers in Peppery Draw Last Eve

Chicago, Jan. 21—(AP)—Billy Petrolle is knocking at the lightweight champion's door but apparently the Fargo, N. D. challenger cannot shake Spug Myers, clever Idahoan.

A chance at Sammy Mandell's crown was promised Petrolle if he beat Myers last night, but after ten peppery rounds two judges and a referee agreed that the fight was a draw.

Upper ranks in the featherweight division were somewhat thinned however, when Ray Miller won the decision over Eddie Shea, also of Chicago. Ringsiders called it the finest fight of Miller's career so far.

Northwestern U. Swimmer Wins A. A. U. Championship

Chicago, Jan. 21—(AP)—Swimming team, Walter Golbath last night bested both Halvorsen and O'Connor, with the Northwestern University Chicago A. A. mainstays, to win the Central A. A. U. diving championship. Johnny Weismueller regained his title in the century cutting the time made last year by Arne Borg, who did not defend.

Hammond Bowlers Jump Into Lead in Tourney

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 20—(AP)—A small squad of Hammond, Ind., bowlers tumbled an astonishing number of pins at the 13th annual Interstate Bowling Tournament here. The Hoosiers five man team went into first place with the highest score ever made in the tourney, 3,095 and in the singles and doubles starts were made that indicated more records would fall. Supplies got 693 in the singles and he and his partner Purcell got 488 in their first game in the doubles. Close to 200 teams are competing in the tournament including crack fives from big bowling centers like Chicago and Milwaukee.

A Chicago team, the Brucks who had been leading for days in the five men event with 3,063 looked like the tourney winner when displaced by the Hammond team.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Knowledge of God is mankind's great need. The understanding of God as infinite, ever present Spirit, as the loving Father, infinitely merciful, possessed of all good, which He has always bestowed upon man. His perfect reflection—this is the understanding which reveals the true relationship between God and His perfect idea, man.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Lord of all life, below, above
Whose light is truth, whose warmth is love,
Before thy ever blazing throne
We ask no lustre of our own—
Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Knowledge is the consciousness of our distinctiveness from the Infinite. Faith is the consciousness of our oneness with the Infinite.—Thomas Davidson.

I know no life divided, O Lord of Life,
from Thee;
In Thee is life provided for all mankind
and me;
I know no Thee, O Father, because I live in Thee;
Thy life it is which frees us from death eternally.—Rev. C. J. P. Spitts.

Knowledge is in every country the surest basis of public happiness.—George Washington.

If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will stay with you, and I will give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also.—John.

AMBOY BAPTIST CHURCH
Rev. C. F. Kerr, Minister.
"The Church That Exalts"
9:45 o'clock Graded Sunday School. Clayton W. Rockwood, Superintendent. It is hard to live a Christian life, harder alone than in fellowship with like minded people. If we have not found it so, it is probably because we have been content with a name instead of a life. The Christian life seems easy only when we are not living it. Success in it comes only to those who press forward and put forth the highest endeavor. The church is your helper in all this. Welcome awaits you in all our services.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS

Copyright by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"The Black Diamond Express," starring Monte Blue, is Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
John Ballard, left poor by the same unkind fate that deprived him of his parents—the one in a railroad accident, the other through grief—works his way through college. Phil Hardin, son of the President of the road whose negligence John holds to blame for his own father's death, is a gay fellow student, who hires John to tutor him safely to an unearned diploma. Through Phil, John meets and loves wealthy Viola Ruskin, but realizes he must make a name and fortune before he can broach love to her. Phil suggests John take a job on the railroad.

"Well," John countered, "I've got lots of reasons. For one thing, I think I'll be a good lawyer. For another, it was what my father had set his heart on my doing, and my mother, too. And—oh, I don't know—some lawyer can be of some real use, it seems to me."
"Well," he said, "I've got lots of reasons. For one thing, I think I'll be a good lawyer. For another, it was what my father had set his heart on my doing, and my mother, too. And—oh, I don't know—some lawyer can be of some real use, it seems to me."
"Most of them aren't!" said Phil. "Gosh, my father hires them by the year—in every town the road runs through!"
"I know," said John. "But you've almost got to be a lawyer if you want to get anywhere in politics, and I've got an idea that I'd like to try that, when the time comes. No, I'm going to stick to the law. I may be making a mistake, but I don't think so."
"Oh, you'll be a good lawyer—I haven't a doubt of that," said Phil. "It's just that I hate to see you working so darned hard when I could fix it so that you wouldn't need to, that's all. But have it your own way—you will anyway, and I might as well quit arguing with you."
"I think you're going to have a wonderful career, Jack," Viola told John. "And I hope you will go into politics. I can see you as a district attorney, fighting some great case against graft or to make things better for poor people."

John stood over Phil to protect him, stinging a chair.

"Well, that's a long way ahead," said John.

"Not so very long, perhaps," she said. "This is a time for young men, everyone says. And you're bound to succeed."

"I'm going to try," he said, grimly. "That's one sure thing. I've got to. No one's going to take care of me if I don't."

"I'd like that, if I were a man," she said. "I'd like to feel that I owed everything to myself—that no one had helped me to get anywhere. Anyone can succeed who's born to the right sort of parents. It means a lot more to win things for yourself."

John met Mr. Hardin more than once when the railway president came to see his son. Once or twice Henry Jordan, the great financier, accompanied him on these visits to Newton, and John met him, also.

Jordan, with his natural ability to size up those he met, saw an unusual quality in John, and spoke to him, once, about his future.

"Law, eh?" he said. "Well, you might do worse. Come to see me when you've been admitted to the bar. I may have something to offer you."

"Thank you, sir," said John. But he smiled, as he turned away. He would not, he knew, call upon Henry Jordan.

John, to his surprise, was among the leaders of his class, and one of those to be graduated with the highest honors. He had not expected that, for he had never been a flashy, brilliant scholar. His steady plodding, however, had done more for him than the intermittent brilliancy of some of his classmates, and he had earned the respect and confidence, as well as the liking of the professors in whose classes he had been enrolled.

Finally, on a June afternoon, the last lists were out. To John, busy in his room, came Phil, beaming.

"Well—we've turned the trick!" he said. "Summa cum laude for you—a good pass for me! Whoops! Come on! We've got to celebrate!"

John hesitated. Yet—after all, why not? He wouldn't be seeing much more of Phil, and he had grown genuinely and deeply fond of him. He had no illusions about the future. Once they were through with college his path and Phil's would diverge, and there was little reason to expect them to cross for a long time, if ever.

"All right," he said, with a laugh. "What's the programme?"

"There isn't any—that's the best part of it. Got the car downstairs—Bill Foster and Jim Radway are down there. We'll have dinner somewhere and then let nature take its course. Come on."

"Fair enough," said John. He had some reason to be pleased with himself, some grounds for a celebration, after all. He had worked his way through college and won the highest honors it had to offer. With everything to handicap and discourage him he had, so far, come through; he had, at least, made a good beginning in life. For a fleeting moment, as Phil slipped the gears into mesh and the car started, John was sorry he was not to see Viola on this of all evenings. But he might, eyes yet; no telling where they would wind up before the night was done.

The party grew gayer and gayer as evening passed into night. There was dinner, first, at a roadside famous for its steaks. The others began drinking at the meal; John, as usual, abstained. But no one complained.

"Of Jack—sober's a judge!" said Radway.

"Gosh, thin' some one is!" said Phil, with a laugh. "Some one's got to drive car. Not me. Not after next drink. Old Jack safe as a church. Let him drive me anywhere—let him take my car anywhere. Can't say fairer'n that, can I?"

So it was that, after dinner, John was at the wheel—as he had been, often before, on similar occasions. That was one of the things he liked about Phil—his readiness to surrender the wheel of his own car when he was in any doubt about his ability to drive. And it was largely because he didn't want to do anything calculated to make Phil obstinate on that point in the future that he always, when driving in such circumstances, went wherever Phil wanted—although Phil often wanted to go to places John would rather not have entered.

It was so this time. For, about eleven o'clock, nothing would satisfy Phil and the others but a visit to Honest Pete O'Brien's. John protested once; then, with a shrug, turned the car and took them there.

Honest Pete O'Brien was a gambler. He owned a house outside the city limits, and, therefore, free from police interference to a great extent; and here, night after night, roulette, faro, poker and dice were played. It was an honest gambling house, probably, if any gambling house was ever honest; after all, the percentage in favor of the house was big enough to keep Pete O'Brien honest, whether it actually did so or not.

The students were welcome, as students known to be the sons of rich men always were. And, after a few minutes of punting at roulette and faro, Phil and Radway settled down at two seats opposite, vacated at a poker table, while John watched them and Foster, pleading weariness, went to sleep downstairs.

Phil did two things from the first—drank steadily and lost steadily. And, then, suddenly, he started up, his eyes bloodshot, his cheeks red.

"This game's crooked!" he cried, pointing to the dealer. "Damn you, I saw that! I saw you slip a card from the bottom of the deck!"

Too late John sprang forward. Some one of the house players had already knocked Phil down. Radway was swept aside. In a moment there was a general fight, John hurled himself into it, and stood over Phil to protect him, swinging a chair. As he swung it the lights went out; he heard a sickening crunch; a man shrieked and fell.

Three minutes later, downstairs, a hushed and sobered group slipped out.

"There's a man dead—" the whisper ran. John and Phil stared at one another. John thought the same thing—that John had killed him. Killed him to save Phil's life, perhaps—but killed him, none the less. A fine beginning for a lawyer-politician's career!

"Not a word about it—even to Bill and Jim!" whispered Phil.

"No," said John. Their hands met as they pledged one another to secrecy.

HIS ANNUAL KICK

Plattsmouth, Neb.—George L. Berger, 78, has a kick coming every year and he comes all the way from California to do it. Berger came here on a steamboat in 1856. Since then the traffic on the river has died, but the old post to which Berger used to tie his boat still stands in its place. Every year Berger returns to kick the post and recall the days of his pioneering.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

To the home of PROF and MOL LIE ELWELL in Camdenville Ind., one night in October of 1898 is brought a woman who had fainted on a train. That night twin girls are born to her and she dies without revealing her name.

The story then moves forward 18 years. The twins have been adopted and named MARGARET and ELIZABETH. They are called RUSTY and BETTY. JIM ELWELL, the son, enlists in the World War. He then discovers that one of the twins loves him.

He is shell-shocked at Sedan and reported dead. Much later he is identified in a New York hospital, where his parents find him with his speech and memory gone. He is like a living dead man.

The day before he is to be taken home he wanders away from his nurse. Late that night he is found in Bellevue hospital with his skull fractured, expected to die. He had been hit by a truck.

The twins, meanwhile, had been identified as the niece of the wealthy JOHN CLAYTON of Indianapolis. Their father is dead.

Mollie writes, saying Jip will live but his memory is gone forever, and they are to bring him home shortly.

When the Elwells arrive, there is a scene and suddenly one of the grief-stricken twins cries that she is Jim's wife.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

MOLLIE ELWELL fell backward into the chair beside Jim. The sobbing girl threw herself on her knees in front of her and buried her head in the woman's lap, her slim young body shaken, trembling in passionate abandon.

Prof Elwell's expression was strangely lacking in surprise considering what he had just listened to. Instead of exclaiming, he half nodded to himself.

But Martha Dalton, standing beside the portieres that covered the doorway between the rooms, gasped and looked all around her as if expecting that an explanation would come from the air.

After a moment the excited girl began to speak again, gaspingly, her words broken by choking sobs; but Mollie and the others heard and understood.

"You—you said I—I have no—no right, Mollie. But I have the right of wife and of—of my love for him." She faltered a moment, then went on.

"I've always loved Jim, Mollie—ever since—ever since we were babies. And then one night out there in the yard I told him so—and he told me he loved me. I—I promised him when he went away not to tell about our marriage until he came back. He—he thought it best for both sister and me. And only sister knew about it, Mollie—she was with us that day we were married—the day we went to Chicago.

"She promised not to tell, too. Now we thought it fun then. But—but now he is back, Mollie, and—he can't tell. He can't tell; he can't speak and tell you the things he'd be wanting to tell you if he could remember."

"Oh, My God!" Martha Dalton cried softly, and covered her face with her hands.

"So," the girl went on, "I had to tell, because I want him, Mollie. Mine. I want to help him to live again—to get back his memory again if possible; if not, then—well, to love him and to help take care of him. Do you understand, Mollie?"

Mollie nodded, unable to speak for tears. The girl seemed calmer now—her voice was not breaking. She turned and looked full at Jim as she resumed.

"That's what I want to do, Mollie."

Then he lifted his head. His glance swept around the room, fell on Mollie and in a penal sum in double the amount of said district computed upon the estimated amount of excavation to be done to secure the full and faithful performance of his contract.

MEXICAN GOVT. INTERESTED IN U. S. PROPOSAL Arbitration Move Not Unwelcome in Official Circles There

Washington, Jan. 20.—(AP)—While no definite move has been made either by the United States or Mexico looking to arbitration of the oil and land law dispute, Secretary Kellogg's announcement that he has considered the possibility of applying this principle to the question has aroused considerable speculation in Washington and Mexico City.

It is concerned chiefly with the many preliminary obstacles that would have to be surmounted before any step was taken to submit the controversy to an arbitrator or some impartial tribunal.

Secretary Kellogg's statement on Public notice is hereby given, that the drainage commissioners of the Drainage District Number One of the Town of Harmon in Lee County in the State of Illinois will receive bids, under seal, up to noon of the 15th day of February, A. D. 1927, at the office of their clerk, John L. Porter, at his residence in the Town of Harmon, for the excavation of material from its main ditch estimated to be 62,500 cubic yards and from its Smallwood ditch estimated to be 5,500 cubic yards (including necessary clearing and from its Emmitt lateral, estimated to be 7,500 cubic yards (including necessary clearing).

Plans and specifications of such work, together with the blank form of contract and bond to be executed in connection therewith, may be seen at the said office of said clerk.

The successful bidder will be required to make and enter into a written contract with said district within twenty days after the acceptance of his bid and on the form heretofore referred to. He will be required to execute a bond payable to said district and in a penal sum in double the amount of said contract computed upon the estimated amount of excavation to be done to secure the full and faithful performance of his contract.

"Betty!" he whispered, and then held her tight.

take care of him and love him. What else do you suppose I care about? What do I care for money, or for the things money can buy—without Jim? What do I care for society or—anything, without Jim? He loved me before this—this awful thing happened. I want to make him love me again—to make him happy. Oh, Mollie, Mollie, you must let me stay with him. You must let me help Jim. I—I—"

She stopped. While she was looking at Jim an unbelievable thing had happened. Half blinded as she was, she saw it, and what she beheld stilled the words on her lips—seemed almost to still the very heart in her body. A stifled cry escaped her.

Then gradually, like the slow breaking of dawn, a radiance began to creep into her face. A light, glorious and splendid, flamed in her dark eyes. She appeared to gather her self—to lift herself up.

"Oh, Jim!" She screamed the name wildly, and rising with a swift movement she literally threw her trembling body into his outstretched arms.

"Oh, Jim!" she cried again, "My Jim! You know me, Jim, dear!"

Martha Dalton had looked up in swift alarm. "What's happened to the poor girl? Prof, take her away—can't you see she's—"

"Mollie! Mollie!" cried the excited girl, "Jim knows me. He remembers me. Mollie, dear—Prof—"

The words died away on her lips and Jim Elwell felt the slender form relax for an instant in his arms. But only for an instant. The body grew vibrant again. She raised her head and smiled up at him.

"Oh," she cried, "God is good. God is so good, Jim."

Jim Elwell was looking at her now with eyes that saw—eyes that held in their depths the look of understanding. His arms tightened around her. Then, at her words, his head bent forward on his chest and for a second his lips moved in silent prayer.

Then he lifted his head. His glance swept around the room, fell on Mollie and in a penal sum in double the amount of said district computed upon the estimated amount of excavation to be done to secure the full and faithful performance of his contract.

SAYS TARIFF IS HOPE OF FARMER FOR HIS REMEDY

Northwestern University
Economist Tells of
His Research

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The farmer must turn to the tariff as a remedy for his troubles, it was asserted here today by Dr. Henry C. Taylor, economist, a member of the Northwestern University staff of the Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities, at the annual Farmers' Week of the University of Illinois.

Readjustment of the tariff will result in consequent readjustment of price ratios, he said.

He declared in the last five years farmers have lost $20,000,000 of their capital account. Their dollar now, according to him, will buy only 81 per cent as much as in 1909-14.

Neither of two moves will relieve the situation for the future," he continued. "Either reduce the tariff on imports so as to deflate the prices of things farmers buy or make the tariff effective for the farmer to the point of restoring his purchasing power. Neither of these moves will restore to the farmers the money they have lost in the last six years, but it will help stop the leak."

"No American economist of standing will say the present protective tariff is economically sound and then say that making the tariff effective for agriculture in some manner will re-establish pre-war price ratios between farm products and city products."

Dr. Taylor said the principle of making the tariff effective for farm products of which there is a surplus is unsound, first those who are class politicians and not economists, and second, economists who would at the same moment say our present protective tariff is economically unsound. The present tariff is unsound. It should be modified."

Sectional meetings brought many messages to the farmer here today. An explanation of how the newly introduced combined harvester-thresher machines are solving the harvesting problems of Illinois farmers was told those attending the joint farm mechanics and agronomy sessions.

The machine cuts from a half to a third off the cost of ordinary methods of harvesting and threshing, according to L. P. Blumner of the farm mechanics department of the University. Soybeans, sweet clover, wheat, oats, red clover, alsike clover and timothy have been successfully harvested in the state, he said.

There are between 60 and 70 of the combined machines in the state now. Artificial drying of grain crops adds materially to their value, H. W. Lehmann, head of the farm mechanics department, related on a difference of one-half of one percent in the moisture content of grain may make a difference of several cents a bushel in the value of the crop when it is sold, he said.

Many attempts to raise fruit profitably in Illinois fail because the particular trees are not adapted for a locality, W. S. Brook, of the horticulture department, said before the horticultural session.

He said the state roughly is divided into three districts for tree-planting, and that the experiment station of the agricultural college has classified varieties which will grow in each one. The variety lists are distributed free.

Proper grading is one of the most important factors in a successful marketing of the honey crop, H. F. Wilson, in charge of beekeeping at the University of Wisconsin, told those attending the beekeeping sessions. He asserted local organizations should provide funds for a co-operative grader.

As long as hog prices stay as high as they are at the present time as compared to corn prices, expansion of pork production and a decline in the present favorable relationship between corn and hog prices is inevitable, Dr. L. J. Norton, assistant chief in agricultural economics, cautioned livestock men.

The foresighted hog producer should recognize this in planning his operations, Dr. Norton suggested.

The result of relatively low corn and relatively high hog prices will be a stimulation of hog production, he pointed out. This will mean some decline in hog prices and probably some increase in corn prices, he added.

"There is little prospect of hogs going back to the low 1923 level because of any increase in production which is now in sight," he said.
